

Zaru

The AI companion that asks before it acts. Sold by My Zaru, Inc., built with 100monkeys.ai.

What it is

Zaru is a personal AI that works alongside its user, remembers them and shows its work. In its site's words: "Zaru handles your email, calendar and web research. You watch each step as it happens, and nothing gets sent until you say yes." It runs on AEGIS, the open-source orchestrator from 100monkeys.ai. The principle behind it, as the site puts it: "Most AI asks you to trust it. Zaru shows you."

Five properties

1. It shows each step. "Each step appears in the chat as Zaru takes it, in plain words."
2. Its memory of you is yours. "Open Settings > Memory to read every word of it, change it, or start over."
3. It asks before it acts. "Anything that sends a message or changes your calendar waits for your yes." In our own use, when Zaru's mail tool sends an email for our founder, by default the send waits under Approvals in the web app until he approves that one message.
4. Scheduled work asks too. A workflow "runs as you, and anything it would send still asks for your yes, just as in the chat."
5. The same companion in your editor. "Connect Zaru's MCP server to Claude Code, Cursor or any MCP client, type `zaru init`, and you are talking to the same companion, with the same memory, from your editor."
